

Green deeds: For seniors by seniors

RPV— Students of Palos Verdes Peninsula High School, Palos Verdes High School and Rancho del Mar will beautify the uninspiring front yard landscape of the Peninsula Seniors Center. The landscape has patches of dead and uneven wild grass, as well as an entrance that screams out for some type of soft framing for safety reasons.

Local Palos Verdes landscape architect Scott Martin will donate his time to design a low-maintenance garden as well as mentor the high school students' good green effort.

The Home Depot as well as PVP Rotary will donate a variety of plants, cottage annuals, dwarf evergreens and ground cover.

Student leaders consisting of mostly graduating seniors will learn about the resources in the community, problem solving, the aging process, families across the life span and giving back to others in need. The Peninsula Seniors will experience the positive qualities of the local youth doing something good and green.

Peninsula Seniors is a 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to providing social programs and services to older adults in the South Bay. On Wednesday, April 1, a networking group of South Bay entrepreneurs, Networking Matters, chaired by Nick Arquette, Adia In-Home Care helped to celebrate the philanthropic accomplishment of the high school seniors at Shade Hotel in Manhattan Beach. The proceeds of the business mixer will be donated to the Peninsula Seniors' Quality of Life Scholarship program, awarded to local Palos Verdes students who exhibit strong career potential in medicine, biological sciences, environmental sciences and medical technology. By making philanthropy accessible to students, both generations will benefit by giving and receiving to each other — "Seniors For Seniors."

For more information about Peninsula Seniors, visit www.pvseniors.org or www.adiacares.com to learn about chairman Nick Arquette at.