

Peninsula Seniors TV programs are 'not just for seniors'

The award-winning Peninsula Seniors TV programs are "not just for seniors," said Peninsula Seniors President Ken Dyda, during comments marking their second-year anniversary producing programs that are be seen daily on several local cable TV channels. The programs also are video streamed from its Web site at www.pvseniors.org.

"What began two years ago as part of our outreach program to better serve seniors on the Peninsula has evolved into programs that attract viewers of all ages," Dyda said.

The programs, which air daily at noon and 7 p.m. on RPVTV, cover a wide range of lecture topics and special events from local communities.

Two Peninsula Seniors members and baby boomers Betty and Jarel Wheaton have produced more than 60 one-hour TV programs during their first two years.

"We produce programs that highlight interesting people, their stories and special events benefiting the community," Betty said.

The programs have been shown on local cable channels in 13 local cities and are in several museums, a children's hospital, libraries and other organizations.

Call (310) 377-3003 or visit the Peninsula Seniors Center at 30928 Hawthorne Blvd., or check its Web site at www.pvseniors.org under videos for more information.